

Autistic spectrum disorder

Equipping young people with a brighter future.

Aspris Children's Services provides specialist schools and colleges to support children and young people with an autistic spectrum disorder (ASD).

Meeting specific needs at an individual level

The complexities of our young people means that different teaching methods are required for each individual. These are tailored to the unique needs, sensory profiles and learning abilities of each child and young person, taking into account their individual needs and differences.

Young person profile

- Children and young people aged 5 to 25 years
- A diagnosis of autism
- Learning and communication difficulties
- May also have significant behaviours that challenge and social difficulties

“I cannot praise the school and the staff highly enough. I feel you are an absolutely outstanding school who put the needs of each individual child first, and as such deserve the recognition.”

Personalised therapy options

At Aspris Children's Services, our students benefit from access to a range of different therapies. This may include speech and language, art, music, drama and occupational therapy, to facilitate the development of communication and social interaction skills.

Specific dietary management, low arousal environments and sensory rooms provide calming and nurturing surroundings, enabling our young people who have sensory difficulties to manage their stress and anxiety levels.

A parent's story

"Having had some very unhappy experiences at her previous school, Lauren* arrived at your school on that first morning feeling sad, withdrawn, angry and with the perception that she could trust nobody. She left school later that day with a huge smile on her face and that smile has never faltered.

Academically, Lauren has come on leaps and bounds, from a child who would refuse to attend lessons, she has become a child who thrives on the praise that she receives from the staff and is now a willing participant in the classroom. For the first time ever, she has a well-balanced and positive attitude towards school life." Parent of a student
